According to maps made out by the United States department of the interior the region of heaviest annual rainfall in Texas lies along the eastern border, extending west to about the line of the black waxy prairies. It is set down at forty-four inches. The black waxy prairies proper are put down at from forty to forty-four inches. That portion of the grand prairie in which Fort Worth is located is marked at forty inches, but a few miles west, say where the Texas and Pacific rallway crosses the Brazos river, there is a change to thirtysix inches. ix inches.

This area of thirty-six inches has a very peculiar run across the state. It starts at Brownsville on the Rio Crande, runs almost due north to opposite Corpus Christi, then bears eastward to the Nueces river. From this point it turns westward, taking a San Antonio and extending fifty or sixty miles above. Here it turns abruptly to the southeast, leaving Austin about twenty miles to northward, and striking the Colo rado river in Wharton county. From this point it courses around to a little north of east until it reaches the Brazos river, where it makes an abrupt turn to northward, fol owing the course of the river to a point west of Fort Worth, where it bends off gently towards the east, going out of the state over the counties of Wichita and Clay. The average width of this area may be put at twenty-five or thirty miles. Be yond this area the annual rainfall gradually decreases as we go westward, Maintaining about the same average width as already mentioned it bears slightly eastward after crossing Red river, where it makes an abrupt turn to the north, continu ing on a due north course to Leavenworth Kan. Here it turns off due east to the Mississippi river, striking that stream at the mouth of the Illinois river. From this point it elbows off to the northwest, con tinuing on this course until it has reached the Minnesota line. At the Minnesota line it turns to the southwest, taking in Chicago Here it bears northward across Lake Michigan to Grand Haven, thence southward over Michigan to Ann Arbor, thence southeast to Toledo, Ohio, thence northward to Toronto, Canada, thence southward to a little below Albany, N. Y., thence due north to Ogdensburg on the St. Lawrence, thence east to Lake Champlain, where it ends, giving place to an area of forty inches annual rainfall. This narrow and singutarly running strip is the only area of thirty-six inches annual rainfall in all North America.

 GENTHERIN—I received the Original Webster's Unsorlinged Distinary. I am well pleased with it I would commend it to all who wish a cheap standard, up to the time of its revision. I know many who can get it who will not make the outlay for an illustrated and revised edition. I am yours very truly etc.

DEAN NIR-I received Webster's Dictionary. It is a very useful book, and is needed in all families. The price, 810 for dictionary and the Daily GAZETTE is very cheep. The dictionary is worth the money that both cost.

JOSEPH GRACE.

DEAR SIR—I think the Webster's dictionary sentime with your daily paper. THE GARRITS, as a premium, is well worth the price paid for the paper, and that is saying a great deal for temper, and that is saying a great deal for I consider the daily GAZETE one of the best and most newsy papers in the state. Yours respectfully.
